Food Stamps

You may receive food stamps if you have low or no income. You may use expenses such as rent, utility payments, and phone bills to subtract against your income. For example, if you make $1,000 but pay $800 in rent, $100 in utilities, and $100 for a phone each month, it is like you make $0/month. Expenses such as car payments, storage units, other monthly bills do not count.

Food Tips

Food Stamps

How to Apply

It is easiest to apply for food stamps in person. They will give you a paper application o fill out then hand back into the front desk. If you would like help, ask to speak with someone to help you fill out the application.

You may also apply over the phone or online but this process can be complicated and require many callbacks and long wait times. It is best to have all your documentation (proof of income and proof of expenses) before applying.

Requirements

- 1. Proof of income (including money given to you by friends or family members)
- 2. Proof of expenses (Copy of your utility bill, phone bill, a lease agreement, or written document)
- 3. Cannot be receiving benefits in another sate
- 4. If you have left a job in the past 6 months, you may need to get a letter from that employer stating you no longer work there.

Low-Income Housing (Must have Income)

Low-income housing (also known as affordable housing) is housing meant for people and families who are unable to afford housing on their own. Typically, there are requirements when applying such as having all your IDs and having a minimum income without making too much.

Each program has its own requirements however if you make less than $800/month you would most likely not qualify. Many of the properties use what I called AMI to determine income eligibility. Learn more about AMI and where you and your family fit with the link below.

WHAT IS AMI
Area Median Income

TMM Affordable Housing

For single mothers, the disabled, people 62+, or people approved for section 8. Services are for People with income of at least $1200 who are single mothers, veterans, disabled, 65+, or receiving section 8. You must have proof of income such as pay stubs, benefit letters of support from family/friends, and/or documentation of income. You may have to apply in person and complete a pre - qualification interview. Intakes take 1 week or longer and availability is dependent on units they have in stock. There may be a wait list and the program will be able to tell you how long it may take, call for Helpful Tips.
